

Your intuition will serve you when its hill-hill

You can only become a fine player when you are free from the intellectual cravings that seek an explanation for everything.

This is a marriage between the intuitive mind and the intellectual mind. Together, they are then allowed to enter the peace and serenity found in the Universal Mind. Here is where you make more balls and win more games.

Intuition does not offer information that can be debated or analyzed. It gives a realization and assurance that what you are doing, or about to do, is good and purposeful. It will bring prosperity into your life.

Intuition is an awareness that is far greater and more accurate than the mathematics of reason. You can slip into a mathematical trap when your opponent gets all the rolls. Your mind will turn to the score during that exchange of bad luck. You need to get out of that mode right away. You need to get back into that intuitive nature that identifies itself with your performance.

After all, your performance is the only reality that matters. The results have nothing to do with reality. Results are in the past or can be somewhere in the future. They are not worthy of a single thought.

"The movement around the table is the only reality that exist and that is found in the intuitive mind so it cannot be talked about."

To enter this world of no thought you must be the sum total of your own performance. You must be what you say you are. Therefore, you must have a purpose as outlined in a previous Monk Reloaded.

Then you must leave the intellectual mind and enter the intuitive mind. And herein is the link between the intellectual and the Universal Mind. The link is the performance. Focus on the performance and you are ready to reach the zone. All outside considerations are but an attack on the performance.

Through stretching in yoga exercise, and careful meditation, you can empty your mind and find the freedom existing within the intuitive mind. During this time, you will receive flashes of enlightenment.
